Abstract: The present investigation seeks to conduct a thorough analysis of instances of custodial violence nationwide, while also critically examining the underlying causes of custodial deaths in India. The study endeavors to contribute to the existing body of literature on "Study Relating To The Custodial Violence By Police In India". Within the study, custodial violence has been categorized into three distinct forms: physical, sexual, and psychological. Various factors contributing to custodial deaths have been identified, including suicide, fatalities resulting from medical treatment, pre-existing injuries, physical assault by law enforcement, attempts to flee custody, and road accidents during transportation. The study provides a range of recommendations aimed at enhancing police administration and advocating for necessary reforms in the conduct of law enforcement officials.
