

Review on the Public Perception of Women Empowerment in the Prevailing Society

Ms. Aarati Pugaonkar¹, Ms. Aister Naidu², Ms. Tanisha Nathan³

Assistant Professor, Lilavati Lalji Dayal Night College of Commerce, Charni Road, Mumbai¹

SYBCOM, Lilavati Lalji Dayal Night College of Commerce, Charni Road, Mumbai³

TYBMS, Lilavati Lalji Dayal Night College of Commerce, Charni Road, Mumbai⁴

Abstract: Throughout the Vedic age and after, women have been subjected to a multitude of injustices, including gender discrimination and limited independence. The society's opinion regarding women was exceedingly severe, improper, and insinuated that females possess inferior talent and physical strength compared to males. Nevertheless, the dynamic social, legal, and economic landscape grants women the entitlement to education, freedom of movement, and various other rights that ensure gender equality. Currently, women are attaining equitable rights and utilizing them to demonstrate their capabilities or enhance their reputation. The evolving trends contribute to the increased effectiveness of women in various domains, including the financial sector and positions of leadership. This study investigates the evolving social conduct of women and their contributions to the advancement of different industries

Keywords: Women empowerment, performance of women in Government and non-government organizations, gender, societal opinion