Abstract: The purpose of this study is to examine the difficulties facing print media journalists in the digital era. Newspapers and print media are increasingly threatened by the growth of internet media. People are now more likely to use mobile phones or other devices to access online media because to the internet's quick expansion. Because print media are under danger, its devoted readers are likely to switch to internet media. The findings demonstrate that the competition between traditional media and new media, in this instance online media, is the greatest problem facing journalists in the digital information era. Journalism, which naturally already had a new route to transmit information and news, saw a tremendous influence as a result of the existence of online media.
