Abstract: This paper delves into the roles played by India and China in various international organizations, shedding light on their collaborative efforts and conflicting stances on global issues. As major players on the world stage, both nations actively participate in multilateral forums, influencing international policies and addressing global challenges. Through an in-depth analysis of their engagements in organizations such as the United Nations, BRICS, and the World Trade Organization, this paper aims to provide insights into the nuances of their diplomatic strategies, collaborative endeavors, and instances of divergence in addressing pressing global issues.
