

A Study to Assess the Level of Patient Satisfaction on Nursing Care Among Patients Admitted in Psychiatric Ward at Sri Ramachandra Hospital, Porur Chennai-116.

A. Yasodhamma<sup>1</sup> and Dr. Shabana Anjum<sup>2</sup>

Research Scholar, Department of Nursing<sup>1</sup>

Research Guide, Department of Nursing<sup>2</sup>

Shri JYT University, Jhunjhunu Rajasthan, India

Abstract: Patient satisfaction is an important of the health care industry in this competitive modern era. The aim of the study to Assess the level of satisfaction on nursing care among patients with mental illness. A descriptive study design was chosen. The size of the sample was 30 A non – probability convenience sampling technique used. The result of the study reveals One (3.3%) were unsatisfied, 24 (80%) were moderately satisfied and five (16.7%) were highly satisfied. This study revealed that there was statistically significant association between the level of patient satisfaction on nursing care and occupation at the level of  $p < 0.05$ .

Keywords: Patients, Level of Satisfaction, Nursing care

REFERENCES

- [1]. Antony swamy.A , wick A (2009) service satisfaction on discharge. Indian journal of psychiatry 3 (7) 12 – 14
- [2]. Bowes L., Allam. T. Simpon A.(2009). Study on morale in acute patient care in psychiatry ward American journal of psychiatry 10( 120) 18 - 20
- [3]. Giupponi G., Hensel.S, millen . p (2009) assess the patients satisfaction in relation with the treatment in psychiatry hospital. 4(8) 24 – 26
- [4]. Hunten .L.P Wehen .C.E., (2009) analysed the patient satisfaction with care provided at two retail clinics American journal of nurses association. 12(20) 550 – 555
- [5]. Groff.S.L , Carbon L.E. Tsang.K. (2008) examined the effects of environmental and nursing care on aspects of patient satisfaction