

A Study on Education and Social Change

Prof. Geeta Yadav and Sumit Gupta

Assistant Professor and Research Scholar

St. Rock's College of Commerce and Science, Borivali (W), Mumbai, India

Abstract: Training assumes an essential part in friendly change by encouraging decisive reasoning and mindfulness among people. It furnishes individuals with information, empowering them to challenge cultural standards and supporter for progress. Through schooling, underestimated bunches get close enough to valuable open doors, diminishing disparity. It advances resilience, sympathy, and a more extensive viewpoint, encouraging solidarity in different social orders. Instructive establishments can act as stages for exchange, melding aggregate qualities. Development and innovative progression frequently come from instructed minds, changing social orders. Generally, instruction is an impetus for positive social change.

Keywords: Empowerment, Awareness, Equality, Transformation