Abstract: The 2024 general elections in India are set to be a pivotal moment in the country's democratic journey, potentially reshaping the political landscape. This research paper examines the key factors influencing the upcoming elections, including political dynamics, voter behavior, and socio-economic challenges. Through a detailed analysis of historical trends, current political strategies, and the roles of various stakeholders, this study aims to provide a comprehensive understanding of the 2024 elections. By exploring the implications of these factors on the electoral outcome, this paper contributes to the broader discourse on democratic processes and governance in India.
