

Commercial Cultivation and Collection Aspects of Medicinal and Aromatic

Kudal Dnyaneshwari Rajendra¹, Fulsundar Apeksha Sanjay², Shelke Viraj Balasaheb³

Student, Vidya Niketan Institute of Pharmacy and Research Centre, Bota¹.

Assistant Professor, Department of Pharmacognosy, Vidya Niketan Institute of Pharmacy and Research Centre, Bota^{2,3}

Abstract: Medicinal and aromatic plants (MAPs) are indispensable components of traditional medicine, pharmaceuticals, and cosmetics. The escalating global demand for MAPs necessitates sustainable commercial cultivation and collection practices. This review article synthesizes existing literature on the commercial cultivation and collection aspects of MAPs, highlighting best practices, challenges, and future prospects.

Keywords: Medicinal and aromatic plants