

Globalization Impact on Sustainable Agriculture

Parth Vijay Kad, Tejas Vilas Kale, Manish Bhivanjya Handava, Omkar Subhash Sonawane

Mechatronics Department
Guru Gobind Singh Polytechnic, Nashik

Abstract: Researchers are having agreement and discussion on various topics or agents of globalization like increasing technology, various types of migration, etc, impacting sustainable agriculture. Due to this, it may lead to a conflict with sustainable agriculture. Globalization causes trouble for farmers. The main reason is due to the increasing population. Due to the increase in globalization, farmers are exploited at a certain level. As increase in globalization, the production of factories and the agricultural sector should increase. So present paper determines and discusses the impact of globalization on sustainable agriculture. Also, various factors affect and impact sustainable agriculture through the medium of globalization. Also, the paper will include the schemes or initiatives taken by the government. Unhealthy competition must be eliminated, even these sectors will help each other because of government policy instruments so that the goal of rural sustainable agricultural growth will be achieved.

Keywords: Researcher, Globalization, Agriculture Sector