

Strategies for Building A Culture of Safety to Minimize Medication Errors in Nursing Care

Stuti Mishra¹ and Dr. Sandeep Kumar²

¹Research Scholar, Department of Hospital Management

²Associate Professor, Department of Hospital Management
Sunrise University, Alwar, Rajasthan

Abstract: Medication errors are a leading cause of preventable harm in healthcare, affecting patient outcomes, increasing hospital stays, and raising costs. Building a culture of safety in nursing care is essential to minimize these errors. This paper reviews strategies such as leadership engagement, effective communication, non-punitive error reporting, continuous education, standardized protocols, and technological interventions. Evidence from recent studies highlights the effectiveness of these approaches in fostering safety culture and reducing medication errors in clinical settings.

Keywords: Medication Errors, Safety Culture, Nursing Care, Error Reporting