

Role of NGOs and Empowerment of Women

Charu Lata<sup>1</sup> and Dr Pukhraj Dadhich<sup>2</sup>

Research Scholar, Bhagwant University, Ajmer, Rajasthan, India<sup>1</sup>

Associate Professor Bhagwant University, Ajmer, Rajasthan, India<sup>2</sup>

Abstract: Empowering the women in these aspects is necessary to convert the idle society into tone-sustainable society. Women commendation can be achieved through provision of acceptable education installations, political support, and effective legislation system and employment generation for women. NGO 'S and the tone- help groups( SHG) play a veritably vital part towards women commendation by furnishing introductory education, vocational training, training for tone- employment, legal aid, protection for women and tone- mindfulness programs. Therefore they're substantially concerned with the upliftment of the women in the society. This paper looks into the process through which women commendation is achieved and the status of women are upraised with the aid of NGOs in the Indian script. Commendation of women capacitates sustainable pastoral and civic development by the upping the profitable, social and political status of women in India.

Keywords: Empowerment of Women

REFERENCES

- [1]. Korten CD. Getting to the 21st Century: Korten, D (1987) Third Generation NGO
- [2]. Strategies: A Key to People-cenU&#39;ed Development, in World Development 1990; 15:I45-159.
- [3]. Mapondera E. Contradictions of Aid Programmes by Donor Agencies to Indigenous NGOs in Alleviating Poverty in Africa,&quot; Paper presented at the Biannual International
- [4]. Symposium of the Inter-University Consortium for International Social Development,Cairo, Egypt, July, 1998.
- [5]. Rowlands J. Empowerment Examined. Development in Practice, 1995; 5(2):101-107.
- [6]. www.shodhganga.com
- [7]. T.Ahmed, Hemalatha, A.Narayana, Role of NGOs In Women Empowerment With Special Reference to Uttar Pradesh, International Journal of Applied Research, ISSNPrint: 2394-7500, ISSN Online: 2394-5869
- [8]. Role of NGOs in Promoting Self Employment Among Women M.Kumaran, Roles, Responsibilities and Trends of NGOs In Women Empowerment