II. LITERATURE REVIEW

This literature overview will take a look at the studies that has been collected on transgender humans in current times, the findings of these studies, and the widespread gaps with inside the literature that want to be explored. In addition, the literature overview will encompass the theoretical framework applied as a backbone for this take a look at and the way it pertains to the take a look at in widespread. Lastly, the literature overview will discover how this take a look at will make contributions to the sphere of social work.

It is essential in a child’s development to have a supportive family to ensure the best possible outcome. For those that are transgender, it is of even greater importance as these individuals face a greater amount of bullying, harassment, and violence than those in the general population. Riley, Clemson, and Sitharthan (2013) found: Overwhelmingly, our participants expressed that they wanted parents, families, schools, and communities to have more knowledge and awareness about gender, sex and issues regarding gender variance. This expressed deficit not only appeared to factor into the negativity and hostility the participants faced on an ongoing basis but also appeared to hinder their family’s ability for acceptance of gender variance.

One of the greatest areas of study is the mental health and well-being of transgender people. As they face many adverse experiences in self-discovery, there must be special consideration paid toward mental health. Lenning and Buist (2013) found an individual’s pain as a result of losing family is only made possible by a hetero sexist and gender-obsessed culture that fosters a fear of the unknown or misunderstood and, consequently, either directly or indirectly fosters psychological turmoil in the lives of both trans individuals and their partners.

Another topic of consideration among the research on the transgender community is the process of transitioning. For many, the process involves hormone therapy in addition to surgery to change facial features, chest size, and genital expression. This process is lengthy and often very expensive for the individual. The use of hormone therapy can have many side effects such as sudden mood changes and other symptoms one would commonly associate with puberty, set out to test a belief that a transitioning person’s sexual orientation changes as a result of the hormone therapy. In the end, it was found that there is no clear connection between orientation and the transitioning process. While there is often a certain amount of fluidity found with people in transition, there is no evidence to suggest that hormones actually change an individual’s orientation.

Through evaluation of the present day literature, it’s far clear that extra statistics is wanted to completely apprehend the transgender community. With time, extra statistics can begin to piece collectively the complicated nature of this group. Literature discovered simple facts approximately the community, the intellectual health problems amongst participants in the community, and the technique of transitioning from one gender to the other.

IV. LIVED EXPERIENCED BEING TRANSGENDER

NEETA KENE (AGE-54)

I was born in Dombivali. we are two brother and sister .when my father found out that I was born not born of boy but a eunuch ,so he attacks my mother everyday used to beat and torture every day. And when I used to play with girls or dance dressed up like girls, they used to beat me a lot. Tired of all these things, I ran away from the house and when I met him, he hit me hard and locked me in in the room for 3 months. And when I get a chance ,I leave home and went to Aurangabad's was hungry and thirsty at the station for 2 days.

Then there I found a eunuch, he took me with him to his house and included him in his group. Then earlier I used to beg at the traffic signal. Then after 4 years I came back home, but except my mother, my brother and my father did not accept me and again throw me out of the house. Then I started begging at the signal and the train. In life I saw very bad times but with that I saw that there are many people like me who need people like us. Then I started living on rent in vitthalwadi and kept those who needed them with me. Today I have my own house and 40 people live in my house.hindu and Muslim both of religions live together in my house. we have been associated with many organizations and have worked with many reality shows called me as a judge's go to the congratulations and the money I get from it ,I donate to the marriage of the daughters of the poor people. God had given me birth with an identity, but people here have taken away more identity from me. Sometimes it hurts that if my own people do not understand me, then what should I expect from this society.

SHAIBA KHAN

I was born in Lucknow.when I was 8 years old I came to know that there's something that's different and i have to dress up like girls .But my siblings used to bother me a lot,the people of the society made me sour for some time kept begging at the traffic signal. Even there people used to harass me .i have been physically abused and raped 25 times. Many times the police officers have physically abused me.

Then after a few days i have opened a vegetable shop but people not used to come there. And when he used to come ,he used to bother a lot, sometimes sweet(meetha) .now I am working again as a sex worker .have been suffering from aids in the last 2 years.

VII. CONCLUSION

In India, hijras constitute a completely unique tradition present along the heterosexual own circle of relatives. One of the problems in writing approximately the trans genders is the disjunction that exists among the cultural definition of "hijra" position and the style of in my view skilled social roles, gender identities, sexual orientation, and existence histories of folks who end up the "0.33 intercourse." Sexual identification is a complicated and heterogeneous concept, and as a consequence entails revel in and expression of every precise organization to form their attitudes, beliefs, and practices.<sup>21</sup> This observe is as a consequence a completely unique try to recognize the subjective revel in of four such people born with intermediate number one intercourse traits and main the existence of a hijra. All the individuals have retold their studies of residing primarily based totally on their “0.33 gender.” The shared information that has emerged displays that hijras on this a part of the sector have now no longer been capable of come to phrases with their inimitable sexual identification due to the subversive pressures from the heteronormative society; their revel in of social discrimination begins off evolved from the own circle of relatives, forcing them to go away the own circle of relatives of origin; they are trying to reconcile with their desires for romance and recognition via way of means of partly denying the position in their own circle of relatives in marginalizing them, and via way of means of giving in to abusive and annoying relationships. But in addition they reconstruct their experience of self via way of means of growing a dedicated courting with their network individuals and attempting to attend to youngsters who're vulnerable. They ordinarily have inclination in the direction of a female identification. However, the cascade of rejection and discrimination from an youth has a ripple impact at the lives of those people; in which they may be much less educated, much less privileged, much less empowered, polarized, and “othered.” This observe might have been enriched, if the ambivalence or disjunction with inside the biological, social, and cultural constructs of a hijra and the related agonies that plague such people have been explored. Qualitative research the use of grounded concept and ethnographic technique might be vital to similarly discover their societal roles, relationships, unmet needs, and for this reason form awareness, understanding, and administrative selections concerning their care and safety.
